

"VIBRATION CRITERIA FOR LANDMARK STRUCTURES"

John R. Schuring, Jr., and Walter Konon
New Jersey Institute of Technology
Newark College of Engineering
Newark, New Jersey

ABSTRACT

The 2.0 in./sec. peak particle velocity criterion traditionally used to protect structures from blast induced vibration damage is non-conservative for landmark structures. Various factors which must be considered in establishing vibration criteria for landmark structures are discussed. Existing criteria by past investigators for this class of structure are presented.